Legend

Box Colors

- Official Communism: Groups whose program was/is similar or identical to the official line of the USSR after 1924.
- Orthodox Trotskyism: Groups who claimed/claim to posess a program similar to Leon Trotsky's own. Within reason.
- Ultraleftism: A broad range of groups which rejected/reject either entries, united fronts, electoral work, or work within existing unions.
- Right Oppositionism: Groups which advocated/advocate for the politics of the right opposition / Bukharinism.
- Anti-Defensism: Groups which did not/do not defend any "workers' states," instead considering them to have formed a new ruling class.
- Anarchism: Groups with a broad range of programs typified by an opposition to any and all uses of state power.
- Industrial Unionism: Groups with purely economic programs in support of the grouping of unions by industry rather than craft or nation.
- Opportunism: Groups typified by an opposition to revolution as the main means of taking power, rather than the existing state.
- Pabloism: Groups which advocated for working within the Official CPs, their popular fronts, or which gave limited political support to ML states.
- Feminism: Groups with programs mainly devoted to the common interests of women, and support for existing womens' movements.
- CWI and Offshoots: Generally orthodox groups, albeit more open to very broad and long term entries, electoral strategies, or united fronts.
- Luxemburgism: Groups claiming to draw from the ideas of Rosa Luxemburg.
- Multiple Programs or Unclear: Groups which have multiple programs, such as multi-tendency pluralism, or hard to define programs.
- Castroism: Groups with programs significantly informed by the Communist Party of Cuba.
- Humanism: Groups which claimed/claim to represent the Marxist-Humanist tradition.

Arrows

- (black) The formation of a new group via mergers or important renamings, or a total liquidation into a group.
- (dark red) A split or expulsion that took an entire group along with it, such as an internal faction being expelled.
- (yellow) A split, expulsion or departure that took a minority of the existing group with it.
- (blue) An entry or ostensible liquidation into another group, whereafter the entryist formation remained a distinct faction.
- (green) Differentiation within an organization, such as the creation of a new faction, without expulsion or splitting.

Misc.

- ✖ The group had no clear successor organization when it dissolved or petered out.
- (red border) The group is still active.
- (black border) The group is no longer active.
- (dashed red border) It is unclear whether the group is active or not.

1907-Aug. 1958

Splits from the YPSL:
A substantial faction from the YPSL, disturbed by the SPA's support for the Korean war, joined with the SYL, which had a dual defeatist position. Later even more of the YPSL opted to join with the SYL in a new group, the Young Socialist League

Splits of the SWP Youth:
When Burnham and Shachtman split from the SWP, most of the party youth, including the large section won over from the YPSL, followed them into the Workers Party, which formed its own youth wing, the SYL, some years later.

How Many?
It has been alleged that no less than five splits occurred off the Communist Workers Group despite it having only a handful of members to begin with. The best known of these was Generic Trotskyist League (40% off) a spoof split. Gerald Smith later became a notable member of Red Labor, a DSA faction.

Workers Voice or the RWL?:
Some sources have a couple of Workers Voice members leaving to join the Marxist Workers Group, while other sources say they came from the Revolutionary Workers League. Since there were only about 4 MWG members, it's probably not very important.

Workers Voice
1990s-2000s

Sollenberger Departs:
Sollenberger and others left the Trotskyist League to join the regroupment organization Solidarity.

Fifth Internationalism in America:
In 2009 the L5I (formed in 1989) gained its US section. I don't know whether this was an import or was connected to a previous group.

Forment in the US:
Lulu Schwartz began writing to Fomento Obrero Revolutionario in the 1970s, gathering a small group around ultraleft and Trotskyist ideas.

Petroni after the IWP
In the 1990s Petroni gave up on the post-IWLfi IWP, instead joining Socialist Alternative. Later he would help form the Left Party.

Grant and Woods in the US:
After the open turn in the Committee for a Workers International, supporters of the Committee for a Marxist International likewise tried to establish a US section.

Local Offshoots:
Several branches of SAlt have left over the years to form more local-level groups. Cincinnati Socialists broke away in August 2021. Another group, Rhode Island Socialists also broke away, later joining the Marxist Center.
